WHO'S PLANNING THE FUNERAL?

IF G1 DIED LAST NIGHT, WHAT WOULD YOU BE DOING TODAY?

No one is comfortable discussing the day of their funeral, but taking control of that inevitable conversation and organizing a principal's final wishes is simply the right thing to do for their family, their legacy and their enterprise. Making arrangements after the loss or, preferably, preparing an end-of-life plan in advance, involves some of the more challenging personal choices one will ever make. Often handled by the Family Office, comprehensive memorial event planning not only ensures that final wishes are fulfilled and the burden of making tough decisions is alleviated, it also establishes a communications apparatus to aid the organization during a sudden or major event. Will your response to this certain departure be well planned, or will it be an emotional guessing game?

A deliberate funeral or memorial event plan eliminates confusion and minimizes differences of opinion. It establishes hierarchy and identifies trusted decision makers in advance of that dreaded day. Very often, family members and multiple entities within their larger enterprises, have opposing ideas and incongruent priorities regarding the way these events should look and feel. Comprehensive plans offer individuals the opportunity to define their own unique legacy and allow their loved ones and family office representatives to "connect the dots". Most importantly, it allows one to create a memorial that reflects their wishes and beliefs, while honoring their life story.

The conversation must include direct and honest dialogue with the principal and their family members, granting them the opportunity to express specific requests and to associate special tributes with elements of personal significance. What is the vision or theme of the memorial and does it align appropriately with their family values? Where will the funeral or multiple events occur? Is the venue grand enough or intimate enough comparative to the number of people expected to attend? Will this be a public or private affair? What are the family's thoughts regarding final disposition of the earthly remains? These are merely a sampling of the hundreds of decisions that must be made. Best to address them now, so as to avoid that inescapable, emotional exchange when you have no other choice!

LHT Consulting Group specializes in creating comprehensive funeral and memorial event plans, coupled with the subsequent implementation of services, which commemorate the lives and legacies of distinguished and noteworthy individuals. We are nationally recognized for high standards of discretion, a strong commitment to excellence and unparalleled expertise. LHT provides superior development of arrangements far beyond the scope and capabilities of traditional funeral providers. Whether the memorial will be a private, intimate gathering or an internationally-televised event, our advisors work privately with families and their trusted agents to create a tribute as unique as the life being honored.
